The Junior Sewing Club held a sale of fancy ar-ticles, candy and cake at the home of Mrs. John Bellows, No. 114 Park-ave., yesterday afternoon in aid of the organ fund of Hope Unitarian Church. Those who had charge of tables were Elizabeth Hubbard, Olive Young, Langdon Bellows, Marion Cariton, Margaret Thorne, Constance Irwin and

Mrs. R. D. Sawyer, of No. 272 Warburton-ave., gave an outing and dinner yesterday to 169 poor little girls who came from New-York under the lare of the Society of Little Mothers, of which Mrs. Johnson is the directress. The children arrived at the Glenwood station at 10:45 o'clock in the forenoon, and were in charge of Mrs. Hearn, one of the mapagers. The room in which the dinner was served was decorated with flags, plants and flowers, the latter being from the Colgate greenhouses, in this city. Among those who assisted Mrs. Sawyer were Mrs. John I. Northrug, Mr. and Mrs. J. Fowler Frow. Mrs. Cummings and Miss Cummings, Mrs. Bames M. Hunt, Mrs. R. Oilver Phillips, Mrs. Hyde, Miss Lotta Crabtree, Mrs. Galligan, Mrs. Bradford, Mrs. Amelia M. Walker and Mrs. William Holme. The children returned to New-York at 4:20 o'c.ock. The ninth pupils' recital of the Yonkers College of Music, of which Frank Steadman is conductor, was given hast night in Old Fellows Hall before a large andlence, instrumental solos were given by Miss Kate Malon. Miss Irene A. Montross, Miss Ethel Pagan. Feter Rogers and Thomas Rhodes. Vocal tools were given by Miss E. Frances Bourtelle, Miss Grace Richardson and John Crawford. Fr day evening, the occasion being a panorama of the Civil War in recitation and song, by Alfred E. Pearsall, under the auspices of Farnsworth Post, G. A. R. The platforms and walls were covered the ceiling and the audience birst out in tremendous cheers. It was a history of the Civil War in two hours.

The Fire Department showed marked efficiency at the burning of Burton's sawmill early vesterday mornins, in spite of the fact that the Water Company's inefficiency was so plainly exhibited. It is savely that the people, especially the property-owners and insurance companies, will insist mai the munic bal authorities shall lay a strong hand upon the Water Company, and it is suggested that condemnation proceedings will be instituted with the purpose of acquiring the waterworks and give the resoluted at all times a supply such as they have a right to expect, instead of periodical spuris of good servic. The fire broke out in the lumber vard, which covers several zeres and is in the result of the city near the New-York and New-Haven Railroad station, about 4:10 yesterday morning, and in less than five minutes after the fire was discovered Washington Engine Company was on the ground, quickly followed by the steamer company and the other engine and hose companies and trucks. Some after the water was started some of the fire engines were useless because of the lack of water in the hydronts. But the Department, which is credited as the hest in any city of its size in this 2-to, were to work to protect other property adjoining, and succeeded, for the mill and a part of a major of the fire private houses. The fire was under control by 6 others are series confined to the mill and the lumber piles. The loss is estimated at about $10,000.

A JUDGMENT AGAINST O. H. P. BELMONT.

IT WAS OBTAINED BY DEFAULT FOR A BILL FOR BRASS AND IRON BEDSTEADS.

Judgment by default has been entered against Oliver H. P. Belmont, banker, of No. 23 Nassau-st. and No. 855 Fifth-ave., for $682, in favor of Hoskins & Sewell, of No. 16 East Fifteenth-st., this city, and Birmingham, England, for brass and iron bedsteads sold to him. Efforts to serve the summons on Mr. Belmont, either at his place of business or home by the sheriff or lawyer's clerk, were fruitless, and an order was obtained from Judge Freedman, of the Superior Court, allowing the summons to be served by delivering it to some one in the house or affixing it on the door. The summons was accordingly left by a co.ored man at Mr. Belmont's house on No-vember 7.

Several well-known and influential citizens were Several well-known and influential citizens were approached by a young woman who has interested herself in labor matters and asked if they would consent to act as arbitrators should the occasion arise. Among them was Joseph H. Choate. Mr. Choate was seen at his home. No. 50 West Forty-seventh-st., last night, and said that he had consented to act in the arbitration of the strike but that by communicating with the members of the Iron League be had gained the impression that the League refused to arbitrate. Mr. Choate said that he would act as an arbitrator should the Iron League change its mind. Ex-Mayor Hewitt, it is said, was also asked to act as an arbitrator. As far as the work was concerned, the strike situation remained the same yesterday as formerly. A few men appeared to be working in a desultory way on the various buildings, but little, apparently, was accomplished. At the rate the work was going on the structures would not be completed in a decade. Both sides have lost a large sum of money by the strike, and no doubt they are both tired of it.

SUIT AGAINST MRS. ALVA S. VANDERBILT. A BARONESS ERINGS AN ACTION FOR THE VALUE

OF A TANTALUS CUP Mrs. Alva S. Vanderbilt, the wife of William K. Vanderblit and the mother of the Duchess of Marlborough, has been made defendant in a suit brought against her in the City Court by the cover $500 the value of a Tantalus cup.

articles, she says, was a Tantalus cup, valued at $500. The Baroness avers that shortly before the matriage of Miss Consuelo Vanderbilt to the Duke of Mariorough Mrs. Vanderbilt requested that he cup and other articles be sent to her for inspection under an agreement to buy them or to feture them. The plaintiff asserts that Mrs. Vanderbilt has failed to return the cup or to pay for it. The summons in the action was served on Colonel William Jay, counsel for Mrs. Vanderbilt, yesterday. The defediant has twenty days to file an answer.

The Baroness further aileges that by reason of the intrinsic value and the exquisite workmanship and delicacy of the cup and the other articles, great care and attention was given to them; that it was her custom to keep them in a plush-lined cabinet, which was seidom opened, and that persons owning such articles, by reason of their great value and rare quality, keen them in safes until some festivity occurs and they wish to display them.

The plaintiff also avers in the complain that Mrs. Vanderbilt promised to redeliver the articles—but on the contrary, took so little care of the Tantalus cup that by and through her carelessness, negligence and improper care the cup was taken, atolen, lost or destroyed, to the damage to the plaintiff of $500.

A feat not generally known, is that previous to the rale catalogue being compiled many choice lots of skins are secured by some of the leading turriers in Europe, such as the court furrier. P. M. Granwaldt, of Paris and St. Petersburg, and the great Grafton Fur Company, of London, whose customers comprise a large number of Americans and members of the principal royal families in Europe.

A SUBSTITUTE FOR THE SHACKAMAXON. The Treasury Department is looking for a new boat to put on between Ellis Island and New-York n place of the old tub Shackamaxon, which is now to transport the immigrants, and it is probable that if John H. Starin does not replace the "Shack" with a genuine ferryboat by December 12 the Department will annul the contract with him. It is said in that case the Mauch Chunk, which is now owned by the New-Jersey Central Railroad Company, will be purchased and run by the Department.

FUN BY THE TAYLOR BROTHERS.

EX-GOVERNOR "BOB" SAYS HE'S A "'X'ORTER AND HE "BRANCHES."

It may be that some of the people gathered in Chickering Hall last night felt the sweet tingling of old-time memories as ex-Governor Robert L. Taylor. of Tennessee, played upon their various emotion with pictures of country life. It is certain that a men's Union, was seen at Clarendon Hall last schools, log-rolling, country school exhibitions, or night, after a meeting of the strikers had been held. "Reid" school, as the Southern phrase has it, with "fleid" school, as the Southern phrase has it, with wild flights of cratory on the part of the barefooted boys of the farm, laughed till the tears ran down their cheeks for the vividness of it all. Those probability it would result in a settlement of the | who had not were simply riotous with laughter over strike. He said further, however, that the strike what they must have looked upon as the exaggerated vagaries of one who is likely to be graduated from the school of politics into a professional

> The topic for the evening was of double signifitalked on the topic of "The Shovel and the Hoe" as an introductory. As might easily have been anticipated, his talk was on the question of labor, of which he said: "Labor is God's great blessing to fallen man, disguised in the garb of a curse." traced the history of civilization far enough to tal moves the labor of the world," he said in another He was earnest for the dignifying power of labor and what had been accomplished by it in this country. It was to labor that posterity owed the Governer appeared with the singers who accompany him, and began on the issue involved in "The Fiddle and the Bow." He felgned seeing dream pictures conjured up by a master of the violin, and these pictures mainly concentrated about his life-long Southern home. They led him easily and naturally to word-painting, and as he talked in that easy, fluent way of his, his auditors were transported into a new realm of the humanities. He talked of everything under the shining sun almost, and excussel himself as being like the old darkey who, having been called a preacher by his master, said no, that he was nothing but "a x'orter, which was a heap different from a preacher. When you are a preacher you have to stick to your text, but when a man's a 'x'orter, why, he can branch."

The ex-Governor branched under the inspiration of the fiddle. He told of the old country school whose curriculum called for a list of studies generally comprised in "one blue-covered elementary spelling-book, one stonebruise, a sone toe and a copy of 'Peter Parley's Travels." He described the old school-teacher, the country fiddler and the singing-master, giving an example of the latter's method of leading his class-which well-nigh threw his nudlence into convulsions. After nearly two hours it was with difficulty that he succeeded in bowing himself out. him, and began on the issue involved in "The Fiddle
